[SPEAKER_00]: Yeah, that's great. That's a great idea. So usually, I'm going to tell you a little bit more of what we're going to do today soon. But usually, I started these interviews kind of like by asking, what do you think this research is about?. Like, what do you think we're doing here?

00:21.833 --> 00:53.432

[SPEAKER_01]: um so what i understood from like the the email i got and like what i understood like online when i registered was it was to um focus on like what are what the i move what. wait, what are we focusing on when we're looking at TikTok videos?. Like are we staring at the captions?. Are we staring at people's faces?. Are we staring at stuff like that?. And probably how long it takes before we scroll to another video, depending on what we see, I guess. That's what I'm guessing.

[SPEAKER_00]: And then do you have an idea of what do you usually look into?. Like what type of videos and TikTok videos get you?

01:04.917 --> 01:25.437

[SPEAKER_01]: I think I'm pretty aware but I think you guys probably know more than I do after watching like all my recordings so yeah I could probably be like oh I like lifestyle I like this I like that whatever but you guys probably like no you're not like that at all so yeah yeah that's true that makes sense

01:26.698 --> 01:45.938

[SPEAKER_00]: So you said that in your journal that you had TikTok and then you deleted it. Do you have a TikTok account now or you made it only for this research?. Just to understand your relationship with TikTok or social media in general.

01:46.992 --> 02:28.102

[SPEAKER_01]: So I actually struggle with social media a lot, especially during the pandemic. I would argue I had an addiction to a point where I would stay up until like 6am watching TikToks and then I would nap and then I would go to school or go to work or whatever. So it's been. I would delete it because it was a problem and then I would reinstall it when it was like, oh, I can control the problem. But then obviously I couldn't. So then I moved out and then I had no choice but to like ignore TikTok completely. So I had it uninstalled for a bit and then I did reinstall it around the same time that you guys started the research.
